

Dutch manufacturer of pigtail protection channels

Article Overview

Global Cable Protection (GCP) is a leading Dutch manufacturer of cable protection systems, including solutions suitable for pigtail protection channels.

Global Cable Protection (GCP), formerly known as CPNL, specializes in subsea and onshore cable protection systems designed for long-term durability and reliability . Their products include cast iron articulated “half shell” systems, which provide robust mechanical protection for cables, including fiber optic pigtails, and are engineered to withstand harsh environments and extended service life. These systems are boltless and have been independently tested for a 25-year lifecycle, ensuring high performance in demanding applications . GCP also offers interface adapters and J-Tube Entry Systems (JES), which allow controlled entry and mechanical support for cables, making them suitable for integration with existing fiber management setups . Their solutions are widely used in offshore renewable projects but can also be adapted for industrial and onshore fiber installations. For additional fiber-specific components, companies like Norden Communication and Netceed supply LC, SC, and other fiber pigtails in the Netherlands, but these focus on the fiber connectors themselves rather than protective channels . If your goal is to protect fiber optic pigtails in a structured and durable manner, GCP provides the most relevant Dutch-manufactured solutions, combining mechanical protection, long-term reliability, and compatibility with various cable management systems .
